Androscoggin.

Marvelous specimens of minerals have been found in the blastings of the stone dam on the Little Androscoggin. A gentleman from the Smithsonian Institute, has examined some of them. Remarkably fine specimens of talc are found there in quantities, and some exceedingly rich pockets of quartz crystal.

The Lewiston policemen had a fine time at their ball, Thursday night, and will have some pocket money left over. They sold over $500 worth of tickets and cut down some on expenses probably so that they will net about $400. They had about one hundred and fifty couples on the floor, City Marshal Guptill leading the grand march. The officers were honored by the presence of Capt. Thomas F. Allen of the Bangor force, Deputy Sheriff Despeaux and wife, of Brunswick, and officers Thresher and Sparrow of the Portland force. They had sixteen dances on the order, Perkins orchestra furnishing dance-music.

Aroostook.

A few days ago, George Sutherland, Jr., met a moose in the road in Ashland. Mr. Sutherland happened to have a revolver with him with which he shot and killed the animal.

The Aroostook Republican says: "There is considerable excitement among our Provincial neighbors over the rumored construction of a railroad from Quebec through Northern Aroostook to Halifax via Moncton. It will be a direct line from Quebec to the sea. It is said that this proposed road will run through Caribou."

On Friday morning, the 14th, the barn of Mr. Ezra Day, of Presque Isle, was destroyed by fire, together with about eighteen tons of hay, a hog and some farming tools. The fire was caused by children playing with matches in the barn. No insurance.

The Farmers' Institute, at Ashland, with the same gentlemen who participated in the meetings at South Presque Isle, and with the same or a similar programme, was held on Thursday, the 13th inst., and was quite well attended by the farmers of Ashland and vicinity.

Hon. J. M. Deering, of Saco, President of the State Board of Agriculture, has been spending a few days in Presque Isle, as the guest of Edward Wiggin, Esq. Mr. Deering has had an opportunity during his stay to see much of the country about Presque Isle, and pronounces it the best farming section he ever visited, not excepting the west.

The North Star understands that all the apparatus has been ordered necessary for establishing an electric light plant at Presque Isle. A location for the same has been secured on a lot purchased of Isaac McGlauflin, on the west side, on which work has already commenced, and it is expected that the system will be in operation at an early day.

Aroostook girls are smart and tough. One day last week three of them started on foot from Ashland, taking their dinner with them and their faithful dog to bear them company, walked to Portage Lake where they were joined by another young lady, who knows how to handle the oars, took a bateau, crossed the lake, ate their dinner, and returned to Ashland the same evening, having walked eighteen miles. These girls can travel on snow shoes, ride horses, milk cows, teach school, play the piano, and are first-rate housekeepers, says the Herald.

The memorial services held by the Presque Isle Lodge No. 39, I. O. O. F., on Thursday evening were of an interesting character, and were attended by a large number of members and invited friends. The exercises were opened by singing, followed by a prayer by Rev. Mr. Warren. Rev. G. M. Park gave an interesting and instructive address, followed by Rev. Mr. Warren who referred to the social benefits and good influences arising from the institution of Odd Fellows.

Some twenty-five or thirty ladies and gentlemen attended the meeting at the Presque Isle reading room on Monday evening, which was called to consider the question of organizing a Chautauqua circle. Rev. Mr. Warren explained quite fully the details of the plan, and its advantages as a means of culture and social pleasure. It was decided to form a circle and an organization for that purpose was made by the choice of Jos. B. Hall, Esq., for President, and W. D. Graves as Secretary and Treasurer.

Cumberland.

The steamer State of Maine had 4,733 bushels of potatoes on board on her Monday trip from St. John, nearly all of them coming from Prince Edward Island, where the potato crop is said to be excellent this year.

This is from the Bridgton News: "One of the most aged of Bridgtonians is Mrs. Hannah Littlefield, widow of Aaron Littlefield, who was ninety-two years old last May. Although not very strong, her health is good and her mind clear and active. She is living with her son-in-law and daughter Mr. and Mrs. Enoch Martin, in Portland."

Thursday night, W. B. Sawyer's house in Portland was entered by a sneak thief. The family were in another part of the house and the front door had been unlocked. The thief went up stairs and secured a pair of diamond ear drops worth $200, a ladies' hunting case watch worth $35, a gold chain worth $35, an old-fashioned open-face watch and two $10 bank notes. He departed as he entered and left no clue behind him.

The arrivals of fish at Portland, Friday, were the largest for any one day of the season. Twenty vessels landed cargoes and the fish merchants were rushed all day. In all, between 125 and 150 tons of fish were landed, during the day, at that port.

Professor Rogers, of Colby University, is constantly receiving applications for special investigations for widely different parts of the world. During the past week, calls have been made from Florida, Minnesota, California, and Dublin, Ireland. One call is for the investigation of the co-efficient of expansion of a new alloy; another is for a special form of micrometer, and that for Dublin is for a special form of ruling upon two glass plates, which were sent to Waterville by express.

Knox.

At Rockport village there are ten patent lime kilns, and at Camden village, two, besides a large number at Rockland, and Thomaston. They have a capacity of producing thirty-five thousand barrels of lime each, annually. They employ about fifteen men to a kiln, and each kiln produces a hundred dollars worth of lime every day. The largest portion of what constitutes the value of this product is paid out for labor. The supply of lime rock at Rockport comes from two sources, first the Simonton and Coombs quarry at Simonton's Corner, a distance of three miles to tide water at Rockport village.

Lincoln.

The Boothbay Register says Mr. Hiram Spofford has sold Indiantown Island to G. B. Kenniston for $2,000. A syndicate of Bar Harbor capitalists will soon proceed to improve the natural advantages.

Mr. H. F. Morton, superintendent of the South Paris chair factory, who was so badly injured by a bull several months ago, has resumed his position, though not yet able to walk.

Sagadahoc.

A Bath man is reported to have become enamored with a Rockland woman to such an extent as to cause him to leave a wife in Bath and take up his abode in the lime kiln city. It is said of the fellow that he left his wife in a nearly destitute condition, having disposed of nearly all the household effects before leaving town.

Somerset.

At Dead River, last Monday, Harry Lane and J. G. Harlow left their camp to look at some timber. They sat down behind a tree-top to wait till the swamper and chopper came up. When they came they had their gun. They saw a partridge and fired; one shot hit Harlow about half an inch from the jugular vein and seven hit in the tree he was leaning against.

The Secretary of the Treasury, Wednesday, awarded the contract for heating apparatus for the federal building at Belfast, to George T. Reed, of Belfast, at $1,545.

Mr. Joseph C. Patch, of South Brooks, died very suddenly last week, aged sixty-seven years. He had been to the post office and was returning home, and in stepping over a fence his foot went into a hole which wrenched him somewhat. Recovering, he went on, and coming to a cooper shop went in and engaged in conversation with the occupants. Mr. Patch began a story concerning coopering, when his companions noticed that he hesitated and his head fell forward to his breast. He was carried into the house, but was dead.

We have received, says the Belfast Journal, from Captain Charles Salvage, some fish scales which are a great curiosity. They measure 2½ and 2¾ inches and came off a fish 6 feet 2 inches long, that weighed 207 pounds, pronounced by experts a Sereus, a very rare species, found only in the tropics. This fish was taken in the Gulf of Para, near La Brea, in the Island of Trinidad. The fish was taken by Capt. Salvage, who threw the lilly iron plumb through him. Salvage says that when brought on deck, the fish resembled a section of one of the roofs of a fancy French roof cottage, as the scales are scalloped.

Washington.

The sardine factories in Eastport are running steadily now and are buying fish at a lower price than at any time before in the season. The factories have no idea of closing until December, when the law compels them to, as the close time for herring commences then.

The oldest man in Washington county is, without doubt, Francis Anthony, who lives in Milltown. He was born in March, 1787, and although more than one hundred years old, he prepares and takes into his house the most of his fuel and does other light work. He has a profuse head of black hair with no sprinkling of gray. He is a little hard of hearing, his eyesight is quite good, and he is as vigorous as some men at seventy-one.

The Beddington Tannery which is one of the best in the State, was started in '84 by E. E. Church, Esq., involving an outlay of $100,000; is thoroughly equipped with the most improved machinery, driven by a hundred horse power engine. The buildings are all constructed of the best material, and unless destroyed by conflagration will remain to witness the extermination of the hemlock growth, which is being reduced at the rate of 5,000,000 feet per annum, and yields 4,500 cords of bark, requiring an expenditure of $20,000. Four hundred tons of leather annually find the way into the markets from this industry at a value of $130,000. To produce this amount requires the constant employment of twenty-eight hands, incurring an expense of $200 per week. Within the time the population of the town has nearly doubled, and thousands of dollars have been added to its taxable wealth. In addition to all the details which an enterprise like this requires the energetic proprietor finds time to look after the interests of the farm which is annually becoming more extensive. This year he had twenty acres planted to grain and hoed crops. Among the yield is 300 bushels of oats and 200 bushels of potatoes, the garden produce when harvested will add several hundred bushels more to his products, says the Machias Republican.

York.

The zenith of assurance was reached by an advertising agent who visited Biddeford, the other day. After decorating a high board fence with legends relating to his particular wares he stepped into the road to admire the view. Noticing that two cherry trees in a neighboring garden rather detracted from the effect, he coolly stepped over and began to cut them down with an axe he took from his wagon. The owner arrived on the scene just in season to save his property.

Plucky Joseph Lewy and the Bear.

Joseph Lewy, son of Atran Lewy, of Princeton, was cruising along Big Musquash Stream, Thursday, October 13, in search of an otter that had been seen several times in the vicinity of the "Ox Bow" on that stream, when he espied a large bear sitting up on his haunches very close to the bank. Lewy had nothing but duck shot in his gun, says the Machias Union, but drew up with his canoe as closely as possible and fired at his bearship, putting the charge of shot just behind the shoulder and bringing him to the ground. Lewy immediately landed and struck the bear across the back with his axe, thereby injuring him so that he could not move away. In making an effort to deal a second blow he caught his foot under a root and fell directly over the bear's head. The bear caught one of Lewy's legs in his mouth and his teeth went through the fleshy part of the calf of the leg. He then released the leg and grasped the foot just back of the toes, lacerating the member in a terrible manner. Lewy then succeeded in clearing himself, returned to his canoe, got his gun and, reloading it with shot, returned and this time killed the animal, firing at close range. Notwithstanding his serious injuries, Lewy dragged the bear, which weighed one hundred and eighty pounds after being dressed, to his canoe, tumbled him in, and paddled the canoe a distance of eight miles to Peter Dana's Point. He was in a very weak state on arriving there, and is now in a very critical condition, his leg and foot being badly swollen. Lewy is under the care of Dr. Flower, of Princeton, who thinks he will get around in time, with extra care.

The Heyward and Brockholst Cutting interests have now taken all of William Cutting's property, amounting to about $300,000, in payment of this judgment.

During the month of August one cigarette firm sold 60,324,540 cigarettes. Let us consider for a moment what this means. It would be a cigarette for every inhabitant of the United States, with a few extra ones for visitors. If placed end to end they would extend 2,617 miles, or across the continent from the Atlantic to the Pacific Ocean, or from Boston to London. Should one cigarette be smoked each minute, day and night, without intermission, it would take 115 years to consume this quantity.

Mrs. Forbes, the wife of Mr. Forbes, the well-known naturalist and explorer, who a year or two ago published an account of his scientific researches in the Eastern Archipelago, has written a narrative of her adventures while she accompanied her husband in his travels. Mrs. Forbes' experiences in the East were in some respects unique. She lived for a few weeks absolutely alone in the mountains of Timor, and was the first European woman who visited Papua. The book is dedicated to the Countess of Aberdeen.

A Boston directory of 77 years of age, or ten years before Boston became a city, contains the following information: At that time Boston had 9 selectmen, who were surveyors of highways, and with 12 others constituted the School Committee. There were 17 constables, 14 senators, 45 doctors, and 4 dentists. There were but 4 banks. In the Telegraph Office.

PECULIARITIES OF CUSTOMERS—ABSENT-MINDED PEOPLE WHO LEAVE VALUABLES.

[Washington Star.]

A man, pale and out of breath, rushed into the telegraph office the other day. He cast his eye hurriedly over the row of shelving at which people stand to write despatches, and suddenly bounded forward and seized upon a sealed envelope that was lying among the pile of "blanks," broken pens and dry ink-bottles. His hands trembled and he hesitated to open it. As he tore off the end, the crisp green edges of of a package of treasury notes were visible. He explained to the receiving clerk that there were $250 in the envelope, and he had left it on the shelf more than two hours before. It had lain there in reach of two dozen bootblacks and newsboys, and people coming in to send off despatches had picked it up or brushed it aside. Some had scribbled on it and some had twirled it in their fingers while talking and put it down again without ever discovering.

"It is a common thing," said one of the clerks to a Star reporter, "for people to lose things in a telegraph office. It seems to be the most natural thing in the world for them to put things down and go out. There is no telling how many things are lost here every day. People are always coming in and going out, and the chances seem against ever finding anything that is left. But it is queer how many things lie about for hours without being carried off, and are finally recovered by their owners. Nearly every sort of thing you can imagine anyone carrying in their hands in the street is left in here. Gloves, pocket-books, canes, umbrellas, handkerchiefs, private letters and packages, and a variety of little parcels just bought at some store, are left. Men lose principally canes and umbrellas, or private papers they take out of their pockets. Women are most apt to put things down and go off without them. People are generally in a hurry, and frequently greatly excited when they go into a telegraph office, and they are liable to forget everything but their despatch.

"When a woman comes into the office she generally has a parasol, a hand-satchel, a pocket-book, a card-case, a smelling-salts bottle, and a small parcel. Frequently she has a pug dog. She first deposits these things on the desk. Then she pulls off a glove and adds that to the pile. She gets a big pile of blanks and three pens. She tries one pen after the other. They all scratch and sputter. She finally gets the right sort of a pen and writes a despatch, which she finds contains fifteen words, and don't say what she wants to. She scratches out five of the words, and it dont mean anything. Then she writes it over, counting the words. The words are all right this time, but the despatch don't convey the idea. She unbuttons her jacket and tries it again. Then she runs her fingers through her bangs, skews her bonnet on one side, and jerks off her glove. Finally she gets what she wants and shoves it through the window, gathers up about half her goods and rushes out, all in a flurry. Two hours later she comes back after her fan, or glove, or pocket-book."

While he was speaking a lady came in in a great hurry and picked up a black pocket-book, swelled out with opulence, which had been lying all the while in a pile of telegraph blanks at the Star man's elbow.

"There!" exclaimed the clerk. "It has been an hour since that lady sent off a despatch, and no one saw that. There's luck! Well, they aren't always as fortunate. There are too many bootblacks about. They are always hanging around, looking through the windows and taking an inventory of the desks. No one can ever tell how much they find, or how much is found by other people who come in to send despatches and are thrown in tempting contact with abandoned property."

The Statue of Longfellow.

A native of Lewiston, Franklin Simmons, the sculptor, is commissioned to create the statue of the poet Longfellow, which is to be erected in the poet's birthplace—Portland. The clay model has just been finished in Rome; will be put into bronze within the next six months, and the statue will probably be unveiled in Portland in the late spring. The Parisian journals have treated the statue in a eulogistic way and the American Register of Paris has said of it:

"The poet is represented in a sitting attitude, the right arm resting in an easy position on the back of a richly carved and ornamented chair, while the other is thrown carelessly forward on his lap, and loosely holding a mass of manuscript. The ample folds of a cloak falling from the shoulders, sweep around and cover the knees in a manner that is at once natural and graceful, as an example of artistic composition. The space beneath the chair is broken by some stray volumes that serve alike to fill a vacancy and to form a suggestive adjunct of a minor nature. The head, leonine almost in the flowing locks so characteristic of the man, is inclined slightly forward in a thoughtful way, and is expressive of modest and dignified intellectuality as its prevailing sentiment. The height of the figure, if standing, would be ten feet, and the pedestal upon which it is to rest is to be about eleven feet in elevation."

It is no wonder that invalids lose faith in all specifics, when so many worthless medicines are advertised to cure various diseases, but which, when tried, are "found wanting." We have yet to learn, however, of the first failure of Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry to cure coughs and pulmonary disease.

Death of Elihu B Washburne

The telegraphic columns of the WHIG Monday morning conveyed the sad intelligence of the death of Hon E B Washburne at Chicago Saturday In September last he was brought almost to death's door by an attack of congestion of the brain but had almost entirely recovered when he was stricken down Saturday with a heart trouble and died in a few hours Mr Washburne was a representative American and during his long and eventful career he enjoyed in an eminent degree the respect and confidence of the people A native of this State Mr Washburne was one of the many men Maine has sent forth, an honor to their State and to their country

The Washburne family, descendants of John Washburne, the first Secretary of the Council of Plymouth has been of note in various ways The father of Elihu B was Israel Washburne, of Massachusetts, while among his brothers were Israel, Jr, for ten years a member of Congress from Maine two years Governor of this State and twelve years Collector of the Port of Portland, Cadwallader C for ten years a Representative of Wisconsin in Congress, Major General in the war, and for two years Governor of Wisconsin William D, for some time a member of Congress from Minnesota and bearing the military title of General and Charles A, for seven years Minister Resident to Paraguay Elihu B Washburne was the third brother He was born in Livermore Me Sept 23, 1816 his father at that time keeping a country store and enjoying only moderate pecuniary advantages After a boyhood on the farm the youth was sent to Gardiner to learn the printer's trade at the office of the Christian Intelligencer and though his connection with that office was not long on account of the failure of the paper yet the active mind of the young man managed to pick up a great deal of information in this new line of occupation

He began school teaching in a district school but soon afterward obtained work in the office of the Kennebec Journal dropping this however two years later, because he found the printer's trade was injurious to his health He decided to become a lawyer, studied at Kent Seminary, in the law office of Hon John Otis of Hallowell and attended the Harvard Law School but did not graduate from there The West was then his goal and as he reached Galena, Ill, where he had decided to settle just as the campaign of 1840 was in progress entered at once into political strife on the side of the Whigs, winning quickly a standing as a ready speaker and debater Four years later when he had established a comfortable practice, he made his entrance into public life as a delegate to a Whig convention at Baltimore where he made the friendship of Henry Clay In 1852 Mr Washburne although residing in a Democratic district, was elected a Representative to Congress and there he advanced at once toward the front ranks, winning by his able career re-election in successive order from 1853 to 1869 He was early pronounced in his opposition to the extension of slavery and was an enemy of extravagance and corruption

For ten years he was Chairman of the Committee of Commerce and in his last Congressional term was Chairman of the Committee on Appropriations besides serving as member of other important committees During the war he was a leading friend of the Union, and he it was who suggested Col U S Grant of Galena as a worthy officer to be made Brigadier General by President Lincoln Afterward Mr Washburne was instrumental in framing and passing the bill that made U S Grant a Lieutenant General and subsequently General of the Armies of the United States When the leader of the armies subsequently became President he made Mr Washburne Secretary of State and the latter in deference to the wish of his friend resigned his Congressional position to take up the duties of the Cabinet Department But the position was retained only a few weeks, owing to impaired health and then the ex Secretary was appointed by President Grant Minister to France

The new ambassador to the French nation reached Paris at a critical time, at the very verge of the Franco German war When notice of the declaration of war was received at Berlin Count Bismarck directed the German Charge d'Affaires to turn over the archives of the Embassy of the North German Confederation to the United States Legation, and Minister Washburne receiving from his home Government an approval for such a step, communicated with the French Government to learn to what extent he could secure protection and free conduct out of France for those Germans who desired to leave This was an important action that did much to establish precedent for future emergencies of that kind Soon after this step was taken the French expelled the Germans from France, and in the days of that exodus the American Legation gave passes to 30 000 Germans and pecuniary assistance to nearly half that number, for the men and women were obliged to leave the homes and business they had built up In short Mr Washburne acted as the representative of Germany as well as of the United States during those trying times and his services to German citizens in Paris have become a matter of history A large number of the subjects of Emperor William were thrown into prison, and these Mr Washburne attended to making right fall application for releases that were at his request, promptly granted So great was his success that other nationalities applied also for the protection of the American Legation Thousands of people afterward thanked him for his action and several nations and high public officials repeated the expression of gratitude

The German Government was particularly warm in its thanks Sometime after the close of the struggle the Emperor William wished to confer upon the friend of his people the Order of the Red Eagle, one of the highest within his gift, accompanied with a magnificent and costly jeweled star, but on account of the provision that prohibits United States Ministers from accepting foreign orders Mr Washburne was compelled to decline In August, 1877 ex Minister Washburne visited Germany, and then accompanied by Prince Bismarck Herr Von Bulow and Mr Bancroft Davis, called upon the Emperor and Empress and received from them personal thanks for his protection of German subjects a grand dinner following in his honor at the American Legation. The next month the Emperor sent his portrait to Mr Washburne as a token of esteem accompanied by a letter, which read as follows

My Dear Mr Washburne After you have been recalled from your post as ambassador of the United States at Paris, and as you are about to return to your native country, I take occasion to renew any acknowledgments already personally expressed of the zeal and devotion with which you have, under difficult circumstances, protected the German interests during the German French war As a testimony of my gratitude I send you herewith my portrait, executed in oil. You will please to receive the same as a remembrance of the eventful time during which you have been in a position to render efficient and beneficial services to my Government, and, at the same time, as a sign of my regard and kind wishes, with which I accompany your return to private life. I remain, my dear Mr Washburne, your affectionate WILHELM.

Beurath, Sept. 7, 1877

From his own Government Minister Washburne had also received thanks in the form of a despatch sent by Secretary Fish, reading as follows:—

"Your Government has sympathized deeply with you in the trials and privations and annoyances to which you were subjected during the long-continued siege of the capital to which you were officially accredited, and where a high sense of duty, which is appreciated and commended, induced you to remain in the efficient and heroic discharge of the most difficult and delicate responsibilities that fall within the province of diplomatic service. The President recognizes that your continuance within the besieged capital after the discretionary permission given you in my despatch of the 24th of January last has been from the promptings of your own conviction that the interests committed to you required the very great sacrifice of comfort, of the separation from your family, isolation from the intercourse of friends, personal discomforts and risks of health and life This sacrifice and these trials you have endured, and I desire officially to record the high appreciation and warm approval of your Government You have done your duty faithfully and ably, and the President tenders you his thanks for the manner in which you have discharged the delicate duties devolving upon you, and have on all occasions maintained the dignity of your position and the rights of your Government."

It was at his own request that Mr. Washburne returned home after serving nearly nine years in France, a longer period of service than any of his predecessors had enjoyed, save Mr Gallatin, and with a record of which not a single act had been disapproved by his Government His name was several times mentioned for candidacy for the Presidency and in 1880 he received 44 votes for the nomination He had of late years followed the life of a private citizen, enjoying especially literary pursuits, and his recent articles on Paris during the Commune, published in Scribner's Monthly, have been most interesting by reason of their reminiscences and his own ability to narrate them His honors in public life were deservedly won and his respect in private life thoroughly deserved Mrs Washburne, his wife, died in the early part of 1887, following by only a few months the demise of his son Gratist He leaves one son Hempstead, now City Attorney of Chicago, and two married daughters Mr Washburne was a man of considerable wealth, having received by the will of his brother, ex Gov Washburne, of Wisconsin, not less than one million dollars

Mugwump Consistency.

The Boston Herald withdraws the charge that THE WHIG misrepresented it in stating that it justified the President's close affiliation with the Baltimore thugs as a matter of political expediency, and then attempts to defend its championship of Mr Cleveland even when as in this case he arrays himself in open opposition to the work of reform which, the Herald has heretofore claimed to be the uncompromising advocate The absurdity, to call it by no harsher name of the Herald's present course seems to have made some impression even upon the mind of the editor for he closes his article as follows

We do not flatter ourselves into believing that, even after this explanation, THE BANGOR WHIG will thoroughly understand the position of the Herald, face to face with the present Administration

The Herald is right, THE WHIG does not understand journalism that surrenders professed allegiance to a principle to support a President who to day stands conspicuously before the public in hearty co operation with the men who are trying to trample upon that principle in the most offensive manner possible. We submit that in its efforts to keep pace with the President the Herald has been obliged to upset the whole Mugwump creed, as originally put forth When this little band of self styled political purists set out to clear the political atmosphere, their battle cry was to go for the best every time Party lines were to be ignored individuals were to count for nothing, but stern devotion to principle was to be the watch word for all time That sound d well and the changes were rung upon the absolute independence of the Mugwumps from all party ties But by the, however, this platform has been chipped away by Mr Cleveland with his spoilsman's axe, until now the whole structure has fallen with a very dull thud Note the change that has taken place in the tone of the Mugwump press as illustrated by the Herald Less than three short years ago that paper was proclaiming the downfall of machine politics under the leadership of Grover Cleveland, the staunch reformer His election was claimed as the outgrowth of the action of the Mugwumps who had set their face toward the rising sun and nothing was going to turn them from the reform path If Mr Cleveland proved recreant to his trust and permitted the spoilsmen in his party to run things or even influence his action he would be called to a strict account That was the kind of talk we had from the Mugwump press a year or two ago How is it now? The Boston Herald of to-day is indorsing the course of the President in not only refusing to listen to the appeal of the reformers in Baltimore, but in giving his unqualified support to the gang of corruptionists who have so debauched the politics of the city and State that his revolt is the result Here is the record as shown by Mr Cowen the leader of the Independent Democrats

"It is true the Independent Democrats have protested against the German Federal appointments—such as Higgins who burned the ballots in 1876, and was detected in the attempt to get rid of the State's evidence in the case of the political murder of Curran in 1886, Morris Thomas, the unfaithful Judge of Election, the ballot box stuffer and fraudulent bankrupt Rasin, the local boss who has organized all the election frauds from 1875 to the present year and is the recognized head of the criminal election machinery in this city, the notorious 'Sonny' Mahon, who conducted for Mr Gorman the ruffianism of 1875, his brother, 'Jimmy' Mahon, who was appointed to Federal office while still under indictment, and who belongs to a prominent firm of policy backers in this city, George Trust, who, on election day, murdered in cold blood, a colored boy who was quietly walking with his mother, Trust serving a term in the penitentiary for his deed, Owings, who has been indicted for assault with intent to kill, and who shot a witness in the very office of the Justice of the Peace where his case was being tried, Bacharach, an indicted and convicted gambler, Carroll a Superintendent of the Almshouse, who was dismissed for scandalous action there, and who has been tried for almost every crime from assault and battery to criminal assault inclusive, and who is now in the Custom House, Dick Carter a notorious thug, who obtained a position in the Federal service at Washington while under indictment for assault with intent to kill and many others one of whom was a burglar in this city well known to the police, and who was appointed under Gorman's influence to a Federal office in Washington To there Federal appointments and others like them we did make objection, and, while Cleveland men, we believed then, and believe now, that they constitute the greatest stain upon his Administration"

This is what the Herald now indorses and it is quite right when it says the WHIG will probably not understand that kind of journalism.

ELIHU B. WASHBURNE.

His Funeral to Take Place Wednesday.

His Native Town Lamenting His Death.

LIVERMORE FALLS, Oct. 24. Livermore is now mourning the death of one of her most distinguished sons, Hon. Elihu B. Washburne, Ex-Minister to France. Telegrams received here to-day, announcing his demise in Chicago, cast a sad gloom over the entire community. The deceased held a most affectionate place in the hearts of his fellow townsmen in Livermore. While the whole nation is bewailing the death of this great statesman the loss will be most keenly felt in the place of his boyhood. Mr Washburne spent the summer at his summer residence the "Norlands," near this place, and seemed remarkably active and vigorous for a man of his years. The funeral occurs Wednesday.

Funeral Honors at Washington.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 24. Secretary Bayard to-day officially announced the death of Ex-Secretary Washburne. The Department will be closed on the funeral day and draped ten days.

Arrangements for the Funeral.

Services will be held in Chicago on Wednesday afternoon at Trinity church, with sermon by Professor Swing. A Texas Town at the Mercy of Bandits.

RIO GRANDE CITY, Tex., Oct. 24. Starr County along the border is in a state of terror. Mexican bandits ride in gangs through the principal streets at night and the officers dare not show themselves. Saturday a party of bandits came here and mailed two letters, one to Manuel Guerrero, of Roma, the other to Senor Dona Cino Garcia, of this place, notifying them that unless they immediately raised $15,000 and $8,000, respectively, for the bandits, their stores will be blown to atoms with dynamite. Gov. Ross has been appealed to for protection but no response has been received. The United States Cavalry at Ringgold barracks are of no service, because of official red tape. Before the order from headquarters could arrive the the town might be sacked and the bandits safe in Mexico.

THE RAYMOND AND WHITCOMB CALIFORNIA TOURS.

We are not surprised to hear that Messrs. Raymond & Whitcomb's California parties are rapidly being filled. The first one is to leave Boston Thursday, November 10, in a new and magnificent train of vestibuled Pullman palace cars. This is to be the finest railway train ever built, and is to include many novel features. All the comforts of a first-class hotel will be enjoyed by the passengers. The Pullman Commissary department has received carte blanche in regard to the meals, and that is a sufficient guaranty of their quality. It is worthy of note that Messrs. Raymond & Whitcomb are the first to introduce a dining car service between the East and California, and also the first to take a train of vestibuled cars across the continent. There are to be twelve transcontinental excursions altogether. Descriptive circulars may be obtained of W. Raymond, 296 Washington street, opposite School street, Boston.

CONSUMPTION CURABLE.

Since the fact that consumption is both preventable, and in its earliest stage curable, it has lost much of its terror. If the first symptoms are at once recognized, and the proper remedy applied, very few if any one, need die of consumption, which is really lung-scrofula. Like many other diseases this formidable one grows out of impure blood, and this, in turn, from a diseased liver. Hence, we have the hacking cough, the pains in chest, the inflamed lungs, and all the symptoms of hastening consumption, all the result of depraved blood, and a diseased liver. The use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery will arrest all such symptoms, restore the liver to healthy action, and send streams of pure blood into every organ. Of druggists. oct25 d&w1w

LITTLE, "BUT ENOUGH," as Mercutio said of his wound, we refer to Dr. Pierce's little Pellets, which are small, swift, and sure, in cases of sick headache, biliousness, constipation, and indigestion. oct25 d&w1w

ORONO NOTES. Our correspondent writes: An exceedingly able sermon was preached last Sunday morning at the Methodist church by Rev. C. A. Southard, the subject being "Unexpected Good," which he handled with fluency and real eloquence. It is pronounced by Rev. Mr. Southard's constant hearers as having been his grandest pulpit effort.——There was no preaching service at the Congregationalist church last Sunday, so a very large number, including President Fernald and family went to the Methodist church, giving them a large congregation.——The postponed ball of Moulton Engine Company, of Orono, will take place at their hall this evening.

DEATH OF MRS. LEVI MURCH. The many friends of Mr. Levi Murch will extend to him and his bereaved family their deepest sympathy in the death of his wife, Mrs. Phronie B. Murch, who died last evening at half past eight o'clock after a painful and somewhat protracted illness. Her demise was sudden and her many friends will be shocked by its announcement. Mrs. Murch was a lady of lovely character, and deeply beloved by her friends, possessed of fine talent and devoted much of her time to painting, in which she excelled, but indulged in the art only for the pleasure of herself and her friends, never publicly exhibiting her productions. Besides her husband and two sons, Melvin M. and Lewis L., she leaves a mother, Mrs. Cloudman, two sisters and a brother to mourn their loss. The time of her funeral will be announced hereafter.

WINTERPORT ITEMS. Our correspondent writes: Little Nettie, the only remaining daughter, of Mr. and Mrs. F. C. Young, died on Saturday, of brain fever, aged eight years. C., held a camp fire at their hall on Tuesday evening of last week to which Frank Flagg Post, of Hampden, was invited. Clam chowder, stews, coffee and other refreshments were served, after which there were speeches and music by members and visitors. Mr. Alfred Stinson, of Searsport, gave interesting reminiscences of the battle of Gettysburg. It was a very pleasant occasion.

WASTE STEAM IN THE SEWERS. The Engineering and Building Record and the Sanitary Engineer, of New York, having been inquired of in regard to connecting steam blow-offs and drip pipes with a modern system of small pipe sewers has the following in reply:

"The connection of steam and sewer pipes is very objectionable for two important reasons—first, on account of the damage which may be done to a brick or cement pipe sewer, and especially to the joints of the latter by the steam or hot water, which also injures lead joints in iron pipe, the iron expanded by heat compressing the lead and causing the joint to leak when cool; and second, that if the steam is discharged in sufficient quantity it escapes through every opening, carrying with it the deliterious emanations of the sewer. If for any reason it is not convenient to dispose of the steam and hot water otherwise, they might be conducted to a well-ventilated cesspool through a sufficient length of exposed pipe to insure complete condensation and reasonable cooling. The discharge from such a cesspool could be safely received by the sewer." In some cities there is an ordinance against allowing the blowing off of steam into the sewers.

BANGOR AND PISCATAQUIS AND CANADIAN PACIFIC RAILROAD CONNECTION. The Railroad Commissioners have just rendered their decision as to the manner of connection between the Canadian Pacific and Bangor and Piscataquis Railroads at Greenville. The roads are to be connected according to the plan proposed by the Canadian Pacific at the expense of that company, which is also at its own expense to construct a station for the transfer of freight and passengers. The connecting road is to be along the hill west of the Bangor and Piscataquis station, and to rise twenty-two feet, requiring a grade of about fifty feet to the mile. The connection when constructed is to be operated at joint expense with the Bangor and Piscataquis Railroad Company. The Canadian Pacific is not allowed to extend its dump more than fifty feet from its present location, that is, only to the base of the hill, and must cross the Bangor and Piscataquis yard by trestles. The shores of the lake are also reserved to the Bangor and Piscataquis Railroad and all its yard, except the bare width of the right of way for the width of the trestle work.

BUILDING AT GREENVILLE JUNCTION AND SHIRLEY. Some quite extensive building is being done at Greenville Junction and Shirley on the line of the Bangor and Piscataquis Railroad. At the former place three excellent dwelling houses are being erected, the best one of the number by Captain Samuel Cole. These houses are quite near each other, and are all handsome, substantial buildings. Mr. J. H. Eveleth is getting the materials together for another house in the vicinity of these already being built and will begin its construction very soon. There is a large local demand there for building materials and the mills have all they can do to supply the demand. Mr. M. G. Shaw is even shipping short lumber to the place from Bath. At Shirley the foundations have been laid for a large boarding house to be erected by Mr. J. H. Eveleth for the accommodation of the workmen in his saw mill. The house will be situated near the railroad track, and it will be well made and well adapted to the purposes for which it is intended. Mr. Eveleth has also moved an old building, near the site of the new one and is fitting it up as a store to carry a general stock of goods. E. & J. F. Webster will soon build a steam mill at Shirley, and expect to have it up in season to saw and ship some lumber this winter. They will cut between two and three millions feet of lumber. These building operations will greatly benefit these towns in many ways, and indicate prosperity in that region. All of the builders deserve much credit for their enterprise.

NOROMBEGA HALL. The appearance of Norombega Hall, both outside and inside, has been greatly changed within a short time, and a great improvement been made. The painting on the exterior has given it a handsome and attractive appearance. The interior, including Concert Hall, has been painted in different colors tastefully chosen, and the latter hall fitted to a new floor so that dancing may be there indulged in. The engine room and boilers have been well looked to and renovated, while the timbers of the foundation have been carefully examined, and found to be perfectly safe. The piers back of the hall have been made firm and solid. All of the repairs and improvements will be completed by the first of next week, and old Norombega will hardly know itself without looking into a glass when everything is done. About $1,000 will be laid out in making the important changes. The whole work has been under the supervision of George Stetson, Esq., who has spent much of his time recently in looking after the improvements, and much credit is due him for his efforts and taste in carrying out the plans.

A ROUGH EXPERIENCE. Mr. Frank E. Baker, of this city, who has been on a number of weeks' trip to Baltimore and points in Virginia, is on a short visit to his parents in this city before returning to Cherryfield where he is at present located. Mr. Baker, on his return from the trip, was one of the passengers on the steamship Alleghany which ran ashore near Martha's Vineyard, last Thursday night in a gale. The storm was so violent that the boats from the life saving station nearby could not be sent out to the assistance of the passengers who were obliged to remain aboard the steamer, which had keeled over on her side and over which the waves ran freely, until the following afternoon when the gale moderated and the life boats took off the passengers, all of whom were saved. It was an exceedingly unpleasant situation for the passengers who did not know but that they might go to the bottom any moment and they were happy people when they once more stood on terra firma. The steamship was afterwards beached and has been pumped out and towed from her dangerous position. The experience that the passengers had is one long to be remembered, and one through which they would not care to pass again.

ASSIGNMENTS OF MAINE CENTRAL CONDUCTORS. The arrangement of the Maine Central passenger conductors as they will run upon the new time taking effect yesterday is as follows: F. A. McIntire and Henry Judkins will run the Pullman trains, while George E. Whitney and L. V. Philbrook will have charge of the Portland and Bangor day express. Messrs. Bodge and Anderson will as usual run the Portland, Lewiston and Skowhegan through trains. John Jewett and H. A. Whitney have been assigned to the morning train from Portland to Bangor and return on alternate days, and Robert Alden has charge of the evening train from Portland to Augusta, returning the following morning. L. W. Pollister, E. G. Chase and C. H. Potter will run the the Bangor and Vanceboro trains. Marshall Tarr and W. H. Maling have charge of the Bar Harbor trains and Mr. Putnam of the Bucksport trains. Mr. C. H. Hathaway will as usual have the Old Town train. Conductor Sprague has been assigned to the new train making daily trips between Auburn and Skowhegan. The usual corps of conductors will officiate upon the Androscoggin branch this season.

STABBING AFFRAY AT LINCOLN CENTRE. A lively row occurred in Lincoln Centre Sunday night, resulting in a stabbing affray. It seems that six laborers on the Canadian Pacific Railroad who had been paid off Saturday night, came down to Lincoln, got something to drink and then went to the Penobscot Hotel, kept by James Babcock, for more. He refused to let them have anything. Before his refusal, however, they had asked one of the bosses of the sub-contractor to have a drink, but he answered that he did not take anything, and they then began to pick a quarrel with him. Finally all of them pitched into him, but he defended himself vigorously, laying several of them low in the dust. One of the men crawled up behind him while the others were engaging his attention in front, and, drawing a knife, stabbed him in the leg and neck, making painful although not serious wounds. Three of the ruffians were up before Trial Justice Joseph Burland, at Lincoln, yesterday, and were bound over to the February term of Court. They will be brought to this city to-day and lodged in jail.

Mrs. Caroline Webster Smith.

To the Editor of the Whig and Courier:

Your columns have already contained a brief and appreciative notice of Mrs. Smith, who has so recently passed away from among us. She has left so large a circle of friends to mourn her loss that a more extended notice would doubtless be welcome to the very many in whose hearts her memory is treasured with such esteem and affection.

Mrs. Smith was a member of the Webster family. She was born Oct. 12th, 1812, at the family homestead near the Red bridge and on the river bank where her father built the first vessel that was ever launched in this vicinity. Here her early years were spent in the educational privileges of the time and the peaceful duties of the home. And when in 1846 she married Rev. Thomas Smith, then pastor of the Congregational churches of East Orrington and Brewer Village, she went to her new sphere happily fitted, both by natural endowments and education, for its congenial employments. Their home for three years was at East Orrington. In 1849 they removed to Brewer Village, where they resided until the death of Mr. Smith in 1861.

It was during this period that the writer, then a student in the Seminary, became acquainted with the family, and learned to esteem both Mr. and Mrs. Smith for their genuine Christian qualities and for their active labors, in all of which the devoted wife was an able and efficient co-worker. After the death of her husband, Mrs. Smith returned to Bangor, where she has resided ever since up to the time of her death. She was very fond of her home, and made it the centre of an ample and genial hospitality. None who have had the privilege of her friendship will fail to recall the atmosphere of cordial courtesy which pervaded it, or the placid face and cheerful serenity of her who presided over it. She was constantly doing for others, and never refused the frequent drafts made upon her time and strength for the friendly services of charity and sympathy. More recently her activities have necessarily abated with the gathering years and the failure of health. Early in the summer she went to Boston for medical treatment, and later to the White Mountains, where she enjoyed the glorious scenery and bracing air, but without any permanent benefit.

Returning to Bangor the first of September, she went temporarily to the home of her daughter, Mrs. J. G. Blake, where for a time she seemed to be improving. But she was taken ill again on the twenty-seventh of September and rapidly failing died on the tenth of October.

The day of her burial, the twelfth, was her seventy-fifth birthday. Her genial presence, her happy disposition, and her spotless Christian life will be greatly missed.

Of the Webster family of ten children two brothers and three sisters survive her. Of her own family there were two children, both of whom are living, Mrs. J. G. Blake, of this city, and T. H. Smith, who for the past twelve years has been a resident of Chicago.

AMUSEMENTS.

Shadows of a Great City at the Opera House.

As was expected a very large audience was in attendance last evening at the Opera House, those who were present knowing that they would be treated to a fine performance as the play has been seen here before and its excellent character is well known. Their anticipations were fulfilled in every respect and the splendid manner in which the play was put on more than pleased the audience as the vigorous applause that followed the strong parts, attested. Exciting situations in the play are numerous and the closest attention is given the piece throughout.

As was stated in the WHIG at the time of the last year's visit of the company, Miss Tiffany's "Biddy Ronan" was one of the best pieces of Irish comedy acting ever seen here, and met the most hearty applause and laughter.

Miss Harron took the double role of "Annie Standish" and "Helen Standish." In the latter she is the heroine of the play and her rendering of the part was strong and at the same time very pleasing. Mr. W. A. Whitecar as "Tom Cooper" gave the best of satisfaction and did some excellent acting.

Mr. Edeson's "Jim Farrow" was an excellent piece of acting and the character was finely taken. Mr. Herman was very good as "George Benson" The character of "Abe Nathans" was finely taken by Mr. W. W. Allen, and "Uncle Sheeney" has rarely been better set forth. Mr. W. H. Bunton assumed the role of "Mr. Arkwright" very successfully. The other parts were well taken.

The scenery, especially that of the banker's mansion in the last act was very handsome and realistic.

The same play will be repeated to-night, and another large audience will undoubtedly be present.

Fisk Jubilee Singers.

The Fisk Jubilee Singers will give a concert at the Opera House to-morrow evening, and the Boston Advertiser gives them the following flattering notice:

So uniformly excellent were the numbers that it is difficult to make special comment, except to say that, from the beautiful opening piece to the familiar cadences of "Swing Low Sweet Chariot," and the reverential benediction, there seemed nothing wanting to make the performance perfect of its kind. There is a special charm attaching to these wild, rythmic plantation hymns or "spirituals," modified by the refining tendencies of presentation before the best audiences in two continents. The entertainment of the Jubilee Singers is unique in this and in the peculiar adaptation of religious pieces to secular audiences by touches of brightness, which have in them nothing of irreverence. The power and scope of the voices of this company are remarkable, and they have been cultivated to a fine finish of tone. The audience last evening was thoroughly appreciative, testifying this by its generous applause.

Shaun Rhue.

J. S. Murphy and his company will appear in this city at the Opera House Thursday evening, and of this performance the Leavenworth Press said:

The announcement of the appearance of this able actor in the character of "Shaun Rhue," in the Irish comedy of that name, filled the Opera House to its utmost capacity last night. It is a rousing good piece, laughter provoking, vivacious and full of repartee. It is useless to add that Mr. Murphy was good; in the delineation of Irish character he is inimitable, and as a vocalist he possesses great power and feeling. Mr. Murphy was well supported, especially so by the gentlemen who took the parts of "Donovan" and the "Dominie."

Notes.

Miss Jessie Couthoui, the well known recitationist, will be heard in this city some time during the first week of November.

COUNTESS NARONA

BY WILKIE COLLINS

THE SECOND PART.

CHAPTER V

After only one week of traveling in Scotland my lord and my lady returned unexpectedly to London. Introduced to the mountains and lakes of the Highlands her ladyship positively declined to improve her acquaintance with them When she was asked for her reason, she answered with a Roman brevity I have seen Switzerland "

For a week more the newly married couple remained in London, in the strictest retirement. On one day in that week the nurse returned in a state of most unaccustomary excitement from an errand on which Agnes had sent her Passing the door of a fashionable dentist she had met Lord Montbarry himself just leaving the house The good woman's report described him with malicious pleasure, as looking wretchedly ill "His cheeks are getting hollow, my dear and his beard is turning gray I hope the dentist hurt him!"

Knowing how heartily her faithful old servant hated the man who had deserted her, Agnes made due allowance for a large infusion of exaggeration in the picture presented to her The main impression produced on her mind was an impression of nervous uneasiness. If she trusted herself in the streets by daylight while Lord Montbarry remained in London how could she be sure that his next chance meeting might not be meeting with herself? She waited at home privately ashamed of her own superstitious fears for the next two days On the third day the fashionable intelligence of the newspapers announced the departure of Lord and Lady Montbarry for Paris on their way to Italy

Mrs. Ferrari calling the same evening informed Agnes that her husband had left her with all reasonable expression of conjugal kindness his temper being improved by the prospect of going abroad But one other servant accompanied the travelers—Lady Montbarry's maid rather a silent unsociable woman so far as Emily had heard Her ladyship's brother, Baron Rivar was already on the continent. It had been arranged that he was to meet his sister and her husband at Rome

One by one the dull weeks succeeded each other in the life of Agnes She faced her position with admirable courage keeping her friends, keeping herself occupied in her leisure hours with reading and drawing, leaving no means untried of diverting her mind from the melancholy remembrance of the past. But she had loved too faithfully she had been wounded too deeply to feel in any adequate degree the influence of the moral remedies which she employed Persons who met with her in the ordinary relations of life, deceived by her outward serenity of manner agreed that "Miss Lockwood seemed to be getting over her disappointment But an old friend and school companion who happened to see her during a brief visit to London was inexpressibly distressed by the change that she detected in Agnes This lady was Mrs. Westwick the wife of that brother of Lord Montbarry who came next to him in age and who was described in The Peerage as presumptive heir to the title. He was then away, looking after his interests in some mining property which he possessed in America. Mrs. Westwick insisted on taking Agnes back with her to her home in Ireland "Come and keep me company while my husband is away My three little girls will make you their playfellow and the only stranger you will meet is the governess whom I answer for your liking beforehand Pack up your things and I will call for you to-morrow on my way to the train " In those hearty terms the invitation was given Agnes thankfully accepted it For three happy months she lived under the roof of her friend The girls hung round her in tears at her departure the youngest of them wanted to go back with Agnes to London Half in jest half in earnest she said to her old friend at parting "If your governess leaves you keep the place open for me" Mrs. Westwick laughed The wiser children took it seriously and promised to let Agnes know

The girls hung around Agnes in tears

On the very day when Miss Lockwood returned to London she was recalled to those associations with the past which she was most anxious to forget. After the first kissings and greetings were over the old nurse (who had been left in charge at the lodgings) had some startling information to communicate derived from the courier's wife

"Here has been little Miss Ferrari my dear, in a dreadful state of mind inquiring when you would be back Her husband has left Lord Montbarry without a word of warning—and nobody knows what has become of him."

Agnes looked at her in astonishment. "Are you sure of what you are saying?" she asked.

The nurse was quite sure. "Why, Lord bless you! the news come from the couriers office in Golden square—from the secretary himself! Hearing this Agnes began to feel alarmed as well as surprised It was still early in the evening She at once sent a message to Mrs. Ferrari to say that she had returned.

In an hour more the courier's wife appeared in a state of agitation which it was not easy to control Her narrative when she was at last able to speak connectedly entirely confirmed the nurse's report of it

After hearing from her husband with tolerable regularity from Paris, Rome and Venice Emily had twice written him afterward—and had received no reply Feeling uneasy, she had gone to the office in Golden square to inquire if he had been heard of there The post of the morning had brought a letter to the secretary from the courier then at Venice It contained startling news of Ferrari. His wife had been allowed to take a copy of it which she now handed to Agnes to read

The writer stated that he had recently arrived in Venice He had previously heard that Ferrari was with Lord and Lady Montbarry at one of the old Venetian palaces which they had hired for a term. Being a friend of Ferrari he had gone to pay him a visit. Ringing at the door that opened on the canal and failing to make any one hear him he had gone round to a side entrance opening on one of the narrow lanes of Venice. Here standing at the door as I she was waiting for somebody—perhaps for the courier himself—he found a pale woman with magnificent dark eyes, who proved to be no other than Lady Montbarry herself

She asked, in Italian, what he wanted. He answered that he wanted to see the courier Ferrari if it was quite convenient. She at once informed him that Ferrari had left the palace without assigning any reason, and without even leaving an address at which his monthly salary (then due him) could be paid Amazed at this reply, the courier inquired if any person had offended Ferrari or quarreled with him The lady answered, "To my knowledge certainly not I am Lady Montbarry and I can positively assure you that Ferrari was treated with the greatest kindness in this house. We are as much astonished as you are at his extraordinary disappearance. If you should hear of him pray let us know, so that we may at least pay him the money which is due."

After one or two more questions (quite readily answered) relating to the date and the time of day at which Ferrari had left the palace, the courier took his leave.

He at once entered on the necessary investigations—without the slightest result so far as Ferrari was concerned. Nobody had seen him. Nobody appeared to have been taken into his confidence. Nobody knew anything (that is to say, anything of the slightest importance) even about persons so distinguished as Lord and Lady Montbarry It was reported that her ladyship's English maid had left her, before the disappearance of Ferrari, to return to her relatives in her own country, and that Lady Montbarry had taken no steps to supply her place. His lordship was described as being in delicate health. He lived in the strictest retirement—nobody was admitted to him, not even his own countrymen. A stupid old woman was discovered who did the housework at the palace arriving in the morning and going away again at night. She had never seen the lost courier—she had never even seen Lord Montbarry, who was then confined to his room. Her ladyship, "a most gracious and adorable mistress" was in constant attendance on her noble husband. There was no other servant then in the house (so far as the old woman knew, but herself The meals were sent in from a restaurant. My lord it was said, disliked strangers. My lord's brother in law the baron was generally shut up in a remote part of the palace, occupied (the gracious mistress said) with experiments in chemistry The experiments sometimes made a nasty smell A doctor had latterly been called in to his lordship—an Italian doctor, long resident in Venice. Inquiries being addressed to this gentleman (a physician of undoubted capacity and respectability), it turned out that he also had never seen Ferrari having been summoned to the palace (as his memorandum book showed) at a date subsequent to the courier's disappearance. The doctor described Lord Montbarry's malady as bronchitis. So far, there was no reason to feel any anxiety, though the attack was a sharp one If alarming symptoms should appear he had arranged with her ladyship to call in another physician For the rest, it was impossible to speak too highly of my lady night and day she was at her lord's bedside.

With these particulars began and ended the discoveries made by Ferrari's courier friend "The police were on the lookout for the lost man—and that was the only hope which could be held forth for the present, to Ferrari's wife.

"What do you think of it, miss?" the poor woman asked eagerly "What do you advise me to do?"

Agnes was at a loss how to answer her it was an effort even to listen to what Emily was saying The reference in the courier's letter to Montbarry—the report of his illness, the melancholy picture of his secluded life—had reopened the old wound She was not even thinking of the lost Ferrari her mind was at Venice by the sick man's bedside

"I hardly know what to say" she answered "I have had no experience in serious matters of this kind.

"Do you think it would help you miss if you read my husband's letters to me? There are only three of them—they won t take long to read

... CORSET.

Its the BEST, because

1st. IT IS THE ONLY CORSET EVER MADE that will reduce the size and increase the length of the waist of FLESHY LADIES without injurious tight lacing

3d. IT IS PROOF AGAINST PERSPIRATION and moisture Will neither corrode or soil the underwear stretch or break at the waist The bones never move or come out in wear

4th. IT NEVER CHANGES ITS FORM always retaining its original shape it is invaluable to young ladies because it removes and prevents stooping and round shoulders.
